Three Taiwanese fishermen were rescued yesterday from a small uninhabited island. The men had disappeared for more than three months. They had left Taiwan in a small fishing boat and had planned a week-long trip. On their fifth day, however, they encountered a storm and it badly damaged their boat. Fortunately no one was hurt. After the storm had passed, though, they discovered that the engine wouldn't start, so their boat just floated on sea for over a month. During this time, the fishermen caught fish to eat and drank rain water to stay alive. Finally, the boat floated toward a small island, they found fresh fruit and vegetables, and they continued to catch fish to eat. The fishermen had lived on the island for two months when a passing ship rescued them. Although the three men had lost a lot of weight, they were still in fairly good shape. Their families feared that the fishermen had died during the storm. They were surprised and happy that the ship had found them and they were safe and sound.
