( 10 M. )

There were once two brothers who worked together on their father's farm. They were both honest, hard-working men and they got along together very well. One day their father died and in his will he left the farm and all his property to his two sons. However, in his will the father wrote that the two brothers should divide the property between them. The two brothers were unable to agree about a division of the property. Each one wanted to have the better part for himself. At last, they quarrelled and for some months they didn't speak to each other. Finally, they took the case to Paul Henry, a judge in the section in which they lived in Wales. Henry was well known for always being good at deciding such matters. He listened carefully as each one of them presented his argument. " The matter is very simple " , Henry said " We shall divide the property in this way. One of you will divide the property in the way that he thinks is best and the other one will then have the right to choose which ever of the two parts he prefers. " In this way the case was settled.
